Among this weekend's many, many goings-on is one of the city's most creative and beloved events. The 36th annual Mermaid Parade in Coney Island steps off at 1 p.m. on Saturday, with Amanda Palmer and Neil Gaiman as Queen Mermaid and King Neptune amid a colorful cast of thousands. Be sure to check out metro.us tomorrow, where you'll be able to find lots of photos from this year's pageant.

COURT DISMISSES TRUMP 'APPRENTICE' APPEAL

1 New York state's highest court on Thursday rejected President Donald Trump's latest bid to avoid potentially having to answer questions under oath in a defamation lawsuit by a former contestant on his television show "The Apprentice." The state's Court of Appeals dismissed Trump's request to halt Summer Zervos' lawsuit for calling her a liar after she accused him of sexual misconduct. It said the underlying ruling from which Trump was appealing was not a final ruling, warranting the appeal's dismissal. Trump and his lawyer Marc Kasowitz have argued that the U.S. Constitution deprives state courts of jurisdiction over sitting presidents, and that Trump is immune from lawsuits over private conduct predating his entering the White House. Thursday's order marked the third time Trump failed to end Zervos' lawsuit or at least delay it until after he left office. Emily Thall, a spokeswoman for Kasowitz, said Thursday's order was on "purely procedural grounds" and did not address the merits of Trump's case. Mariann Wang, a lawyer for Zervos, said, "We look forward to continuing the discovery process and exposing the truth."

RUSSIAN POLICE TOLD TO KEEP LID ON BAD NEWS

2 Russia's interior ministry has ordered police to withhold negative news from the media during the World Cup and instead report successes such as crimes being solved, two police sources said on Thursday. A copy of the order, seen by Reuters, instructs police not to release any information about the results of investigations, police raids or other operations before July 25. The World Cup, which Russia is hosting for the first time, ends on July 15, and the Kremlin is keen to use the tournament, which opened on Thursday, to project a positive image of the country as welcoming and open. Russian police usually publish information regularly about crimes including robberies and murders, and also publicize the detention of everyone from suspected murderers to suspected Islamist militants. The interior ministry did not immediately respond to a request for comment. However, Vladimir Vorontsov, who represents the inter-regional police trade union, told Reuters the order was genuine and had been issued by the ministry.

RARE AUDUBON 'BIRDS OF AMERICA' SELLS FOR $9.6M

4 A first edition of John James Audubon's "The Birds of America," one of the most celebrated books of natural history, sold for $9.65 million at auction in New York on Thursday, Christie's said. The richly illustrated 19th century book, featuring more than 400 hand-colored illustrations of 1,037 life-size birds, was one of just 13 complete sets thought to be remaining in private hands. Christie's described the set as "among the most superlative copies in private hands of the finest color-plate book ever produced." It said the price, paid by a buyer who wished to remain anonymous, was the second-highest sum paid for the book at auction. Another of the complete sets went for $10.27 million in 2010. Audubon's "The Birds of America" was first published as a series in sections between 1827 and 1838 and represented his years-long mission to find and paint all the known species of birds in North America. The book that was sold on Thursday was owned by U.S. businessman and naturist Carl W. Knobloch Jr., who died in 2016.

KELLOGG ISSUES HONEY SMACKS CEREAL RECALL

5 Kellogg Co. said on Thursday it is recalling an estimated 1.3 million cases of its Honey Smacks cereal from more than 30 U.S. states due to the potential for salmonella contamination, in the latest case of U.S. food products possibly tainted by the illness-causing bacteria. The U.S. Food & Drug Administration said it worked with Kellogg to issue the recall after preliminary evidence linked the product to more than 60 illnesses. "The FDA is working with the company to quickly remove this cereal from the marketplace," the agency said in a statement. The FDA said it has asked Kellogg to request that all retailers of the product immediately put up signs saying Honey Smacks cereal has been recalled and to remove the potentially contaminated product from shelves. The U.S. health regulator also said it is inspecting the facility that manufactures Honey Smacks. Kellogg earlier on Thursday said it launched an investigation with the third-party manufacturer that produces the cereal immediately after being contacted by the FDA and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention regarding reports of illnesses.

McGregor in plea negotiations from backstage UFC brawl

Bystander video appeared to show the UFC star tossing a dolly at a bus carrying other fighters, two of whom were injured ahead of UFC 223.

UFC star Conor McGregor is in plea negotiations after appearing in a Brooklyn courtroom for less than two minutes Thursday on charges stemming from his backstage brawl ahead of UFC 223 at the Barclays Center in April.

McGregor arrived at Kings County court around 10 a.m., Ariel Helwani of MMA Fighting tweeted.

"As noted in court, we have ongoing discussions with the district attorney's office and hope to be able to resolve this matter to both sides satisfaction by the next court date," attorney J. Bruce Maffeo said.

McGregor's next court date is July 26.

"I regret my actions that led me here today," the Irish fighter said in a statement. "I understand the seriousness of this matter, and I'm hopeful that it gets resolved soon."

Friend and co-defendant Cian Cowley also faced charges from the April 5 incident in which former the UFC lightweight champion crashed UFC 223's media day and allegedly attacked a bus carrying other fighters.

UFC fighter Michael Chiesa suffered a facial laceration, while fellow fighter Ray Borg suffered a corneal abrasion in the melee.

"Conor went bananas and put a beating on the van that we were in looking for Khabib [Nurmagomedov]," Chiesa's coach Rick Little said after the attack. "A million security guards had to restrain him."

"As noted in court, we have ongoing discussions with the district attorney's office and hope to be able to resolve this matter to both sides satisfaction by the next court date."

Attorney J. Bruce Maffeo

Bystander video showed McGregor, who was in a loading area of the Barclays Center with his entourage, appearing to throw a dolly at the window of the departing bus.

McGregor surrendered to police the night of the attack, which seemed to be in connection with the UFC's decision to strip the Irish fighter of his title, which he's held since his last UFC fight in which he defeated Eddie Alvarez in November 2016.

In January, UFC announced that Nurmagomedov would face Tony Ferguson in a title match at UFC 223.

After the Brooklyn brawl, UFC president Dana White told ESPN's Brett Okamoto that McGregor's actions were "the most despicable thing in UFC history," which appeared to mean McGregor's time with the organization was on the outs.

However, White told TMZ Wednesday that he and McGregor are set to meet about the fighter's future in the UFC on June 18. It is unknown where the meeting will take place.

"He and I are meeting on the 18th of the month," White said. "I don't know what's gonna happen. I don't know what Conor has planned. I don't know what Conor and his team have worked on."

NY AG sues Trump Foundation, alleging illegal use of charity

Barbara Underwood's lawsuit wants the president to be banned from holding the position of "director, officer, or trustee of any NYC not-for-profit" for 10 years.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

New York Attorney General Barbara Underwood is suing the Donald J. Trump Foundation after an investigation by her office alleges that the company raised more than $2.8 million "in a manner designed to influence the 2016 presidential election."

The lawsuit, filed Thursday morning, names the foundation's board of directors as well, including President Donald Trump, Donald Trump Jr., Ivanka Trump and Eric Trump. Underwood asks that the Trump Foundation be dissolved and that Donald Trump be banned from holding the position of "director, officer or trustee" of any other New York not-for-profit organization for 10 years, and bar the members of the board of directors from the same for one year."

The lawsuit alleges a pattern of "persistent illegal conduct" spanning more than a decade, including unlawful political coordination with the Trump presidential campaign and repeated transactions meant to benefit Trump's personal and business interests — actions that violate state and federal law pertaining to charities.

Examples of these illegal actions, according to the lawsuit, include a $100,000 payment with funds from the nonprofit to settle legal claims against his Mar-a-Lago resort; $158,000 to settle legal claims against Trump National Golf Club; and $10,000 to purchase a painting of Trump that was displayed at the Trump National Doral in Miami.

$2.8M

The AG's investigation found that the foundation raised more than $2.8 million from the public for Trump's run via a televised fundraiser.

None of the foundation's activities were approved by its board, according to the AG's investigation, meaning the board "existed in name only" and Trump "alone made all decisions related to the foundation." The board has not even met since 1999.

Concerning the Trump presidential campaign, the investigation found the foundation raised more than $2.8 million for Trump's run from the public via a televised fundraiser that Trump held in lieu of participating in the presidential primary debate in Iowa.

The lawsuit seeks an order that would require Trump to reimburse the foundation for these self-dealing transactions, and to pay penalties that could total up to double the benefit Trump saw from these foundation funds.

Trump seemed to respond to the lawsuit via Twitter on Thursday morning, saying that the lawsuit was politically motivated by New York Democrats and former AG Eric Schneiderman "doing everything they can to sue me on a foundation that took in $18,800,000 and gave out to charity more money than it took in."

"I won't settle this case!" Trump tweeted.

Are you for or against the president? is the question Republican face these days. GETTY IMAGES

THE FOREMAN FORECAST: PARTY CRASHER

ANALYSIS

TOM FOREMAN

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

Forget all the old litmus tests for Republicans that once determined the merit of candidates; the questions about abortion rights, taxes and ideology. These days, only one question really matters: Are you for or against Donald Trump?

And some of the primary contests leading up to this fall's midterm election are proving the point. In South Carolina, Republican Katie Arrington attacked incumbent congressman, Mark Sanford, for his criticisms of the chief executive. "I'm running for Congress to get things done," one of her commercials said, "not to go on CNN and bash President Trump!" Trump tweeted his support for her just hours before the vote, and she walked away with the win.

In the Virginia Senate race, Corey Stewart's commercial proclaimed, "Want to stand with President Trump? There is only one choice." He too rode the Trump wave to victory and collected the president's congratulations, amid his controversial statement about Confederate memorials, the Confederate flag and dealings with white supremacists.

Back in D.C., Speaker of the House Paul Ryan tried to brush off the results. "That's just what happens in contested primaries," he said. But polls suggest something else is at work. While about 40 percent of Americans approve of the president's performance, among Republicans, Gallup has that number at more than double. Trump is working that to his advantage — savaging members of his own party over even slight critiques of his style or plans.

"We're in a strange place," Tennessee Sen. Bob Corker says. He argues his fellow Republican lawmakers are now so worried about the wrath of Trump voters, they won't even promote measures they want unless they know he's onboard. "It's almost become a cultish thing."

Whether Trump can turn his primary successes into midterm triumphs this fall remains very much in doubt. But for the moment, the winner's circle is filling with his allies and their message to the Republican old guard is get over it, get in line and get used to it. Or as Kate Arrington told her cheering fans amid the victory celebration, "We are the party of President Donald J. Trump!"

New York will be the first market for Romio, according to its founder and CEO Tarik Sansal. ROMIO

Meet Romio, the 'Uber for everything else' app

The free app offers users expert and influencer recommendations on everything from dog walkers and housekeepers to lawyers and everything in between.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

New Yorkers have pretty much everything they could ever need at their fingertips, from food delivery and pet-sitters to car services and everything in between.

But an app called Romio, which dubs itself "Uber for everything else," aims to take that convenience one step further by providing expert recommendations on those services — and enabling said experts to "expand their own economies," founder and CEO Tarik Sansal told Metro.

"Romio is introducing a model where experts, influencers and friends can make between 3 percent and 7.5 percent of every booking made or received by someone on the platform for a year," Sansal added. "It's a beautiful ecosystem. We really think of it as a social movement that helps bring people together to help their lives and families."

Romio had a soft launch in March and unveils an on-demand option Friday after "we discovered that trust is amazing, but it needs to be fast," Sansal said. "Contacting 15 individual plumbers or housekeepers to see who's available is a lot of work, so we're now introducing our on-demand feature, and we're excited about letting users get trusted services scheduled within minutes."

> "We really think of it as a social movement that helps bring people together to help their lives and families."
> Tarik Sansal

Because the app provides a unique value of expert access to users, the bar to be a Romio expert is "very high," Sansal added. "We have the most established, respected minds in every service category who have consistent media appearances, book launches, speaking engagements and events because they bring the level of know-how that no other app can deliver."

So far, Romio's most-demanded services are for housekeepers, dog walkers, plumbers and hairdressers.

"As more users adopt the platform, we will see wider use from personal trainers to handymen and nutritionists," Sansal shared. "We're also bullish about creating new behaviors. The possibility that you can hire a personal assistant or a student to run errands for you for a fee that is not inflated and benefits you and the provider is exciting."

New York is Romio's first market, but "we are preparing to scale to other markets," Sansal said. "Influencers and celebrities are drawn to our platform because they see it as a source of social goodness that allows people to do the things that they love to do and make their lives and those who use them better. We're looking forward to an exciting summer and beginning to accelerate in the fall."

the GRUMBLE

Stop complaining and ENJOY THE WORLD CUP!

BY GREGORY J. WAKEMAN, METRO FILM EDITOR

Pat King
Grumble Editor

The World Cup is finally here! We here at the Grumble's undisclosed beach office thought we should have our very own Film Editor and soccer fanatic Gregory J. Wakeman make his best case to shake the indifference you may have toward this global tournament and just let yourself enjoy it.

With the world seemingly falling apart at the seams, the World Cup has come around at the best possible time. Like every sport in its pomp, the joy and camaraderie it provokes just brings out the best in people. Not even the repeatedly corruptible folks over at FIFA can blight the glory that is the globe's most-watched competition, as politics, greed and corruption are put to one side the moment the referee's whistle twerps. Yesterday, Russia and Saudi Arabia's best 11 players ran, hurried and sweated out of honor and duty for their countries. Over the next few weeks their Spanish, German, Mexican, Iranian and South Korean equivalents are just some of the folks who will do the same. These games will be a timely reminder that there's so much more that unites rather than divides us, while keeping us enthralled throughout. And that's before we even get to the endless arguments over Messi and Ronaldo, the obligatory English penalty shootout defeat, and the excitement over USA hosting its own tournament, which has now been confirmed, but is still excruciating eight years away.

TREATING GYM LOCKER ROOMS LIKE YOUR BATHROOM AT HOME

This habit that some people have disgusts me to no end. There are people at the gym that I go to a few times a week who don't seem to have any home training. I've noticed when I'm in the locker room that once in awhile I hear someone "clearing their nose" in the shower. You can't mistake the sound, a sharp hiss of a nostril projectile. They are doing this in a shower where other people go to wash up after a workout. I know that we as men sometime have gross habits, but to spray mucus in a public facility is beyond disgusting. These guys could just as easily grab a paper towel or piece of toilet paper and blow their nose. How difficult is that? The lack of consideration is what really angers me. Keep your nose bacteria to yourself!

Treat dad to a great day

We've got eight ideas for a memorable day with dad this Father's Day weekend.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

For the longtime New Yorker dad

Ride a regular old train to the Brighton Beach stop, where you'll be treated to free rides on tons of vintage trains courtesy of the Transit Museum. Relive the days of New York past on trains including the Train of Many Metals, the BRT/BMT D-Type Triplex and B-Type cars and Brooklyn Union elevated gate cars. The real gift, of course, is letting dad tell all of his "back in my day" stories while you very considerately refrain from rolling your eyes. June 16 & 17, 11 a.m.-4 p.m., free, nytransitmuseum.org

Ride a vintage train from the Brighton Beach stop this Saturday. TRANSIT MUSEUM

Outdoor Adventures
NYC PARKS

For the throwback dad

This Saturday is also the best day to be at Coney Island all season as sailors and sirens and all the other creatures of the sea march down Surf Avenue during the Mermaid Parade. Instead of crowding in with the spectators though, you and dad can take in the atmosphere on a couple spins of Deno's Wonder Wheel, from the top of the Cyclone and from all the many tall rides of Luna Park, then find seats at your favorite boardwalk restaurant as the glittering paraders put on a second unofficial processional. June 16, parade starts at 1 p.m. at West 21st Street and Surf Avenue

For the outdoorsy dad

If your dad wishes he could get out into nature more but doesn't have the time, good news. Saturday is Central Park's summer edition of Outdoor Adventures, with rock climbing, stand-up paddleboarding, zip lining, log rolling and parkour — basically a big day of summer camp fun for all ages. Activities are all free. June 16, 11 a.m.-4 p.m., Central Park Bandshell, nycgovparks.org

For the Yankees supporters

It's been too long since you and your dad went to a baseball game. The Mets are out of town all weekend, but the Yankees will play in the Bronx from Friday through Sunday. Longtime fans will want to head to Yankee Stadium on Sunday morning for the team's annual Old Timers Day, bringing some of the team's greats back to the field including Andy Pettitte, Jason Giambi, Whitey Ford, Reggie Jackson and more. Tickets from $38, mlb.com/yankees

For dads looking for something new

New York's hottest steakhouse right now is Cote, the Michelin-starred Korean meat palace with the cuts he knows prepared in modern ways. The star of chef David Shim's menu is the Butcher's Feast, enough for the whole family to try four speciality cuts from Cote's in-house dry-aging room, alongside a traditional Korean barbecue spread. In addition to traditional cocktails, the bar also specialized in craft soju. 16 W. 22nd St., cotenyc.com

Whiskey Stories
PROVIDED

For the whiskey loving-dad

Dad has his favorite whiskeys, sure, but there are so many new bottles coming out of distilleries all over the world, it's worth broadening his horizons. Beginning Father's Day weekend, The Time New York Hotel's LeGrande Lounge will host Rachna Hukmani's Whiskey Stories series that pairs a set of whiskeys with bites. And for Father's Day weekend, the tastings will be accompanied by a comedian telling hilarious dad jokes and stories. June 17, 2 p.m., 244 W. 49 St., tickets are $119pp, available by calling 212-320-2939, email vip@legrandeny.com, or eventbrite.com

For the dad who'd rather be golfing

The U.S. Open, one of golf's biggest weekends, coincides with Father's Day. If your dad wishes he were playing on some of the world's best championship links, get him on the virtual versions at Five Iron Golf. Dad will be swinging real clubs on his choice of 93 digital courses at the Flatiron studio, which also has an on-site bar with beer and wine. 138 Fifth Ave., Floor 4, half hour for $40, full hour for $60, up to four players per simulator, fiveirongolf.com

For the hip dad

All dads like to feel cool, and one of the best ways to keep up with the world is podcasts. One of the biggest names in the business, Gimlet, is bringing a full weekend of talks with some of its biggest starts to Brooklyn for GimletFest. Get entrepreneurial tips from "StartUp", go behind the scenes of "Crimetown", and speculate about UFOs at "Science Vs". Festival passes are $25, gimletfest.com

Why did it take so long for 'Incredibles 2'?

Writer and director Brad Bird reveals all.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

"The Incredibles" sequel finally arrives in theaters this weekend. PIXAR

When it was released in 2004, "The Incredibles" made such an impression on the pop-culture landscape that a sequel seemed inevitable.

Not only did it gross over $633 million at the box office, it was met with widespread critical acclaim, and won two Academy Awards. Most important, though, there were clearly plenty more stories to tell of the Parr family struggling to mix their secret identities as superheroes with their everyday lives.

Despite this success, writer and director Brad Bird recently told Metro that he had been in no rush to get an "Incredibles" sequel out, and commended Pixar for having the same attitude.

"Obviously, when one film is successful there is very little resistance to a sequel," Bird says. "Pixar was very cool in saying, 'If you want to do a sequel to this ever, obviously, we are ready to go.'

"What was cool was that they said, 'When you're ready, we're ready.' They didn't say it had to be done by a certain date. Which is kind of a rare thing nowadays because money is usually put before everything else. But Pixar is a filmmaker centric place. That's one of the reasons I love working there."

It wasn't as though Bird was starved for plot ideas — he had come up with the two main plot points for the sequel while working on the original.

"I'd love to tell you there was a sharp entry point for returning to the franchise," Bird says. "But the truth of the matter is that I had the core idea that Helen would get the assignment instead of Bob while we were promoting the first movie.

"Plus I also had the unexploded bomb of Jack-Jack having superpowers that the audience knew about but the family did not," he adds. "So I always had that in my back pocket, too."

Bird's return wasn't all plain sailing, though. "I had a few other notions that I knew I would have loved to see in a sequel," he says. "But the part that eluded me was the villain, superhero plot part. It took me a while to get something that I thought would be interesting and right.

"Finally, I came up with an idea that I thought was cool," Bird says. "I pitched it to Pixar while we were doing 'Tomorrowland.' They liked it, we started in motion on it, and then, six months, in I realized that didn't work."

Brad Bird took his time bringing the sequel to the big screen. GETTY IMAGES

He said that with a release date set, "a team going, money is being spent, and, 'Holy crap! I am screwed.'"

Bird wouldn't go into detail about the aborted villain except to say that it "involved artificial intelligence" and was a "cool idea" that might "pop up in another project."

But his decision to replace the foe clearly worked wonders, because once he had figured out the right idea to move "Incredibles 2" forward it immediately began to morph. So much so that Bird just couldn't stop writing.

"That part of the story kept morphing and I had to kill an enormous number of darlings," Bird says. "I have never on any film that I have done written so much that I have then cut. I probably have another two and a half other 'Incredibles' movies in terms of scenes that are just on the floor."

We'll just have to wait and see whether that's Bird's way of teasing "Incredibles 3," "4" and "5."

"Incredibles 2" opens in theaters June 15.

‘Talking with Chris Hardwick’ returns with Donald Glover

AMC’s “The Walking Dead”-less talk show returns on Sunday.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

Chris Hardwick’s talk show series returns with special guest Donald Glover this weekend. AMC

Chris Hardwick is a very busy man.

The comedian left the “Nerdist” podcast and website earlier this year, rebranding the former as the “ID10T” podcast, but that doesn’t mean he’s taking a break. Instead, Hardwick is busily preparing a brand-new program for NBC titled “The Awesome Show.” Meanwhile, he still hosts “Talking Dead” on AMC whenever new episodes of “The Walking Dead” and “Fear the Walking Dead” air.

Now that the zombie shows are on hiatus, Hardwick is bringing “Talking with Chris Hardwick” back with brand-new episodes. Sunday’s episode features Childish Gambino himself, Donald Glover (“Solo: A Star Wars Story,” “Atlanta”), who stops by to speak about his recent “Star Wars” role and Disney’s upcoming live-action “Lion King” film.

Unlike “Talking Dead,” “Talking with Chris Hardwick” focuses on whomever happens to be that evening’s guest, regardless of whether they have anything to promote. Why? As the host has explained in previous interviews, he wants the experience to feel more like a podcast than a standard talk show.

Judging by the 15 episodes AMC aired sporadically throughout 2017, “Talking with Chris Hardwick” has been a success. Sure, the occasional guest (or guests) will often come on to promote something anyway, as Bryan Cranston (“Breaking Bad”) did with his 2016 memoir, “A Life in Parts.” But not everyone who came to Hardwick’s couch was there to sell something.

Chris Hardwick

Cranston, for example, spent some of his episode discussing his time playing Dr. Tim Whatley on “Seinfeld.” “Sons of Anarchy” star Charlie Hunnam revealed his iconic character, Jax Teller, was hugely popular among actual inmates, while Jane Lynch shared her favorite lines and memories from “Glee” with the audience.

And this is probably one of the most startling departures “Talking with Chris Hardwick” makes from typical late-night talk shows. Hardwick and his team go out of their way to include the live studio audience and the viewers at home, whether they’re watching live or binging later, in what happens. It doesn’t always make for the best television, but it’s far more engaging than most.

Aside from Glover, the new season of the AMC series will include guest appearances by Chris Pratt, Karen Gillan, Bill Hader, Ethan Hawke, Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg.

“Talking with Chris Hardwick” returns with new episodes Sunday, June 17, at 11 p.m. on AMC.

Russia off to a flying start at 2018 World Cup

Host country dominated Saudi Arabia in tournament's opening game Thursday morning.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The hosts of the FIFA World Cup had never lost an opening match before and on Thursday, Russia ensured that streak stayed alive with a 5-0 thumping over Saudi Arabia in the 2018 edition of soccer's largest tournament.

It was a dominating victory fueled by two goals from Denis Cheryshev. The triumph was Russia's first in over eight months (seven matches), its last coming in an October friendly against South Korea.

Feeding off a crowd of over 80,000 at the Luzhniki Stadium in Moscow, Russia quickly took control of the match, its first since a disappointing campaign in Brazil four years ago was cut short quickly in the group stage.

By the 12th minute, the hosts were on the board thanks to a powerful header from the left side of the box by Iury Gazinsky, who tallied his first international goal for Russia.

Iury Grazinsky (8) scored the first goal of the 2018 FIFA World Cup on Thursday morning. GETTY IMAGES

Saudi Arabia looked content to try and punch back on the counter-attack, though Russia continued to monopolize possession. Mohammed Alsahlawi provided the most notable chance for the Green Falcons when a 21st minute when a header was deflected tantalizingly wide. But the striker showed that he was someone to keep an eye on, especially after scoring 16 goals in 18 qualifying matches for his country leading up to the tournament.

Saudi Arabian defending had no answers for Russia's relentless attack as Cheryshev doubled his side's lead in the 43rd minute to cap off a counter-attack that saw three Russians on just three Saudi Arabian defenders. The ball found its way to Cheryshev on the near post and after a cutback fooled two defenders, he was able to blast his chance near post with relative ease.

Saudi Arabia looked to have settled a bit at the start of the second half, but Russia quickly restored the dynamic to its first-half form. While they constantly probed around the Saudi's box, a third tally came in the 71st minute through the head of substitute Ardem Dzyuba, who was brought on just seven minutes prior to his goal. It was his ninth goal in his last 13 matches for Russia.

Russia put the cherry on top of its victory with two goals in stoppage time. First, a wonder strike from Cheryshev saw the star drop a shot with the outside of his foot from the edge of the 18-yard box into the right corner of the goal before star midfielder Aleksander Golovin's free-kick proved to be the final action of the match.

The three points were desperately needed by Russia, who don't want to disappoint their fans and the likes of Vladimir Putin on home soil. The road ahead gets far more difficult as Egypt, who still are waiting for the verdict on star striker Mohamed Salah's shoulder, and Group A favorites Uruguay await.

Could Kyrie come to Knicks next summer?

Boston Celtics point guard Kyrie Irving is slated to become a free agent during the summer of 2019 after revealing that he would not sign a contract extension with the team. That's good news for the New York Knicks.

The 26-year-old, who was traded from the Cleveland Cavaliers to the Celtics prior to the start of the 2017-18 season, is considered one of the best at his position, accruing five All-Star Game appearances and a championship alongside LeBron James in 2016.

His arrival in Boston was expected to make the Celtics one of the top contenders in the Eastern Conference, which they were. But they managed to do so without Irving down the stretch after he was forced to undergo knee surgery which cut his season short after just 60 games. The Celtics were also without their new signing Gordon Hayward, who was injured on the opening night of the season.

Kyrie Irving will not sign an extension with the Celtics. GETTY IMAGES

With the impending departure of LeBron James from the Cavaliers, the Celtics could very well be the top team in the East if Irving's former teammate decides to make a move out to the Western Conference. Yet his intentions to hit the free-agent market might inhibit that from actually happening.

The Knicks have been linked with Irving since his initial desire to be traded from Cleveland last summer. The New Jersey native grew up rooting for the Knicks and informed Cavaliers management that he would like to be traded to either New York, the San Antonio Spurs, Minnesota Timberwolves or Miami Heat.

While that didn't happen, Irving has continued to make his affection for the Knicks known, telling Kristaps Porzingis that he would love to play with him (h/t SNY).

On Wednesday, ESPN's Steven A. Smith reported on "First Take" that Irving "would love" to be playing at Madison Square Garden.

It's a good thing that Irving isn't hitting free agency this year considering the Knicks don't have a lot of cap space to play with. Next summer, however, is a different story as the team is expected to clear a considerable amount of room to make at least one serious run at a marquee free agent.

Irving is slated to hit a big-time payday in the summer of 2019 and would provide the Knicks with its best point guard since Walt Frazier. Heading into this summer, the Knicks are working with a crowded crop of young point guards including Trey Burke, Emmanuel Mudiay and Frank Ntilikina, who is expected to spend time at the 2 next year.
